COMER'S GUARANTEED CHICKEN Cholera Cure!

After using this medicine for the past ten years, and never finding a case of Chicken Cholera that it would not cure, I feel no hesitancy in offering it for sale with a guarantee that it will cure every chicken that has the Cholera with life enough to eat a particle of the medicine. Your dealer will REFUND THE MONEY, IF IT FAILS TO CURE. Please read the following TESTIMONIALS.

Judge HOWELL COBB, who is authority on all points pertaining to the poultry yard, publishes the following letter in the Southern Farmer: "COMER'S GUARANTEED CHICKEN CHOLERA CURE—This Summer I have had the first touch of cholera in my yard for several years. I lost my best cock and several hens. My neighbor, Mr. James T. Comer, of, Athens, Ga., heard of my trouble and sent me, to try, a package of his Cholera Cure. When I used this medicine I had two hens in collapse condition, too far gone to eat and about to die. Several others were affected. I fed the remedy in food, as directed, to the flock. I gave the two hens named the medicine in solution. One of these died, the other is now well. In twenty-four hours she was relieved, and in one week entirely well. The other affected fowls all recovered health and vigor in a few days. No other case developed. All my flock are now well. It is a month now since the disease disappeared. I believe the remedy of my friend Comer saved me from a destructive mishap of the worst destroyer of fowls.

HOWELL COB3.

HARMONY GROVE, GA., August 22, 1887.—This is to certify that I have given Comer's Guaranteed Chicken Cholera Cure a trial, and can safely recommend it as a certain cure for this fatal disease among fowls.

W. J. GOSS.

ATHENS, GA., Mar. 7, 1888.—MR. J. T. COMER—Dear Jim: When I got the package of Cholara Cure from you my fowls were affected with something that I supposed was the cholera in its first stages. Wgave them only a few doses, and since that time they seem perfectly healthy, and are now in splendid condition. Yours truly,

W. C. ORR.

HBARMONY GROVE, GA., March 8 1888.—J. T. COMER, Athens, Ga., can recommend your C. G. C. C, C, to any one. It is all you claim for it. Respectfully, R. L. HARDMAN.

To Him Who Waits.

Many a castle I've built in Spain,
With turrets and domes that were passing fair,
But the first wild storm of wind and rain
Has proved me my castles were made of air.

Many a fleet I have sent to sea,
Freighted with hopes and ambitions bright;
Never a ship has come back to me,
Though I have watched for them long by day and night.

But I sometimes think there will come a day
When my heart's fond wishes I shall attain—
When walled and towered in grand array,
Shall stand secure my castles in Spain.

And I look to see the sunset's glow,
As it reddens the ocean miles on miles,
Shine on the ships that sailed long ago—
My ships coming back from the Fortunate Isles.

The Confederate's Ruse.

BY JOHN B. TABB.

I was the last of the fortunate few that escaped from Point Lookout prison, he said, in the fall of '64.

The enclosure—known as the Bull Pen—in which the prisoners were kept, consisted of a paling about 14 feet high, with an outside platform, not far from the top, where the sentinels day and night walked their beat in sight of the prisoners.

On the eastern side of the camp was the Chesapeake; and here, if we kept within musket range, we could bathe or fish at any hour of the day—a privilege greatly appreciated by those who could stand the exertion.

For some it became a daily practice, whenever the weather permitted the sport, to fish in the forenoon; and this we did either standing in the water, sometimes up to our elbows or armpits, or sitting on long-legged, crane-like tripods, which the more ingenious contrived for themselves out of pieces of cracker-box. Day after day we would venture out in the broiling sunshine; and I have since wondered, in thinking of it, that no case of sunstroke ever occurred.

Every morning large tubs of garbage from the cook-house and slops from the hospital tents were brought to the beach to be emptied; and those who happened to be bathing at the time had as much as they could do, in returning to the shore, to keep clear of the filth. To one of these "vessels of ignominy" it was that I owed my escape. It chanced in this way:

I had waded out with my fishing-clothes on somewhat further than usual, when I saw a tub floating upside down and drifting toward me. As soon as it was near enough, I watched my chance, and, no one observing me, dived and got under it.

There I was, like Falstaff in the buck-basket, with "the rankest compound of villainous smell that ever offended nostril." For a moment I thought I should suffocate; and doubtless such might have been my fate but for a bung-hole in the side of the tub, which I fortunately discovered, and through which I got enough light and fresh air to supply my necessities. As my head was entirely out of the water, I had but to turn my face to this aperture and follow the tide.

The weather being cool, the bathers that morning were comparatively few; but the beach was lined with groups of prisoners, and why neither they nor the sentinels saw me, I have never yet known.

Once out of musket range, I was safe so long as I managed to keep my footing. My fear was of stepping beyond my depth, and so losing the tub; or else of arousing suspicion by going too fast for the tide. It was necessary, therefore, to move with precaution, and so slow was my progress for the first two miles that it took me fully an hour or more to lose sight of the prison. Even then it was only at intervals that I dared to peep out; and not until noon did I finally venture to doff the tub and make for the beach.

So weak and cramped and dizzy was I when I got ashore, that all my remaining strength was exhausted in dragging on slowly across the sand to the pine woods beyond. Once under the whispering trees, however, and stretched on the sweet-smelling, pine-tag carpet, I fell fast asleep. When I woke I did not know where I was, nor whether the sun, which was then quite low, was just rising or setting.

Tho' greatly refreshed by my five hours' rest, I was desperately hungry, and the question now uppermost in my mind was of something to eat. I knew that the people in that part of St. Mary's were, most of them, kindly disposed to the South, and that very night brought a proof of it in the warm hospitality extended to me at a neighboring farm-house.

On the following morning I left this retreat, not only relieved of my present wants, but provided with what would supply my necessities for at least a week longer.

The adventure that closed my career of danger is the only one, after I quitted the coast that deserves to be mentioned.

I had been traveling mostly on foot since I made my escape; and now, after many a tedious delay, there remained but one critical step to be taken to determine my fate. A distance of ten or twelve miles was before me and I had to pass through the village of ——— to reach my destination. For greater security I was advised to make this last stage of my journey by night, and by no means to enter the village till dark, as there were known to be spies in the place always on the alert.

At sunset, coming in sight of the settlement, I halted to rest and to see where best to conceal myself while I waited for night.

There stood, a little to the left of the road, a clump of thick evergreens, to which, as the nearest refuge, I straightway directed my course. On reaching the spot I was greatly assured to find it a graveyard. This, of all places, I thought, is the one most fortunate for me; so, leaping the low stone wall, I proceeded to examine the surroundings. A family vault, in a crumbling condition, bore the name of the village; and some of the tombs were of older date. In one special corner of the enclosure was a group of fresh graves, where I took it to be that the soldiers were buried; and among these I noticed a newer mound, which, from the flowers upon it, I thought had been raised that morning.

I read the inscriptions from tomb to tomb till it got too dark to decipher them. Presently lights from the distant houses began to appear; and I was just thinking it time to go, when the sound of some vehicle coming my way arrested the thought.

Listening in breathless suspense, I soon found that the wheels were much nearer than I had supposed, the stealthiness of the approach alone having kept me from hearing them. Before I had time to collect myself, a close-covered wagon stopped outside the wall, and I saw two men get cautiously out of it—one to open the gate, and the other to lead the horse in. The time, the place, the mysterious approach—everything tended to agitate me, and I was on the point of taking to flight, when the truth flashed upon me. Proceeding at once to the new-made grave, the robbers, each with a spade from the wagon, began forthwith to remove the loose earth, with a skill and rapidity that proved beyond doubt their professional character.

It may be imagined with what profound interest I watched their operations. In less time than I had conceived it possible the coffin was raised, and the body, around which they threw a long cloak, removed to the wagon. The work of refilling the grave was soon done; and hardly an hour from the time they came in the rascals were out of the graveyard and on their way homeward. The wagon had no sooner turned from the gate than I started to follow it.

There was no moon, and the night was dark; but, luckily for me, the villains drove slowly, and, though at some distance behind the vehicle, I never lost sight of it.

When about half-way back to the village we came to a stop; and I saw the two men, to my great satisfaction, get out at the door of a public house, leaving, meanwhile, the cart and its occupant alone in the road.

Just as the tavern door closed again I quickened my pace, and, impelled by a sudden inspiration, leaped forward and into the cart.

There bolt upright against the front seat, sat the stolen corpse, a hat pulled low down over the face, while the cloak before mentioned completely enveloped the rest of the figure.

My purpose was, first, to remove the corpse, and then, having put on the cloak and hat, to take its place and await what might happen.

I need not have hurried my task as I did, for the men took their time. When they came out at last, it was evident that they had been drinking freely inside; and I saw with delight as they entered the wagon that one had a bottle along with him to imbibe on the way. They resumed their seats, one on each side of me, and we started again.

Hitherto, I am inclined to believe, not a word had been uttered upon the road by either of my companions; but, the alcohol doing its perilous work, they began to talk openly. I learned now that it was not their intention to stop in the village, but at a vacant house six miles beyond; and this place was, as I further discovered, within easy reach of my own destination.

By the time we were fairly out of the village the bottle had already twice been produced, with results that greatly confirmed my hopes of the scheme I was meditating.

My comrades, soon in this maudlin state, became silent and drowsy; and just here it was that my part began. Very gently at first, and by slow degrees, I inclined myself more and more to one side.

"Jim, you are pushing this thing on me," said my left-hand neighbor. "Don't lean on it so."

Jim, with an effort, straightened himself and tried to sit upright. It was his turn next to complain of me, for I gradually sloped my whole weight on him till he gasped for breath.

"By George, it is you that are shoving it now! I'm almost smothered! Pull up the blame thing, will you?' he cried, "and don't let it slip over this side again."

Denying the charge with an oath, the other leaned over, and drew me into position. So ludicrous was it becoming to me, that, but for the stupefied state of the rogues, I must have betrayed myself. The game, however, was not yet done, and my stakes in the issue were far too great to allow it to stop. The question was now of a second move.

I was projecting another descent upon the left wing, when, as if to anticipate such a design, the enemy hemmed me in on both flanks; and there I sat, pinioned between the two, like a handcuffed prisoner.

A nudge of both elbows at once, on the ribs of my sleeping guards, was a shock that loosened their jaw-bones, and brought the cold sweat to their faces.

"What are you up to?" each questioned the other in a tremulous voice.

"I didn't touch it," said Jim, in dismay.

"The deuce you didn't!" exclaimed the other. "Don't tell me a lie! Put your hand under the cloak there, and [illegible]"

Jim meekly obeyed.

"Great Cæsar!" he panted; "if the thing ain't hot!"

"Hot?' I yelled, tearing the cloak apart; "You would be too, if you were in my place!"

The two wretches cast but one look at me, and then, tumbling bodily out of the wagon, took to their heels.

That was the last I saw of them.

The coast thus clear, I seized the reins and drove rapidly on. Next morning discovered me safe at home the happy possessor of a wagon and horse, the spoils of the enemy.—[New York Independent.

Ribbon Enough to Girdle the Earth.

Ribbon for trimmings is in greater demand than ever, and an enormous length of silk ribbon is manufactured in Passaic county, N. J., yearly. In Paterson alone is made about 36,675,000 yards a year. This is 110,025,000 feet, or a little less than 22,731 miles. This would reach from Washington to Java and back. It is two and a half times the distance to Canton, China, three times the distance to the Cape of Good Hope, and seven times across the ocean from New York to England. Three quarters of all the ribbon made in this country is manufactured at Paterson, and about one-tenth as much more is imported. It is impossible to estimate how much is consumed in America, as a considerable quantity is exported, but a careful calculation would perhaps make it about 30,000 miles a year, or considerably more than enough to put a silken belt around the earth.—[New York Star.

A Magnificent Hothouse.

The first magnificent attempt at hothouse building was that of Francis I. of Austria in 1753. They were in five ranges, extending altogether to the length of 1290 feet, many of them being thirty feet high. Landscape gardening, and the adoption of the English style, rapidly spread into France, Germany and Russie after the year 1762. In the latter country there are several magnificent conservatories, only surpassed by those of Kew, Chatsworth, and the Regent's Park, London. The earliest hothouses for the cultivation of fruits seem to have been those of the Duke of Rutland, erected at Belvoir, in 1705. In modern times, the best constructed or most improved kitchen and forcing gardens are those of her Majesty, at Fragmore. The Royal Botanic Gardens at Kew are unequaled in Europe, while those at Chatsworth, Eaton Hall and Trentham are models of taste and judgment.—[New York Dispatch.

The Song of the Heart.

Yes, I will sing you a song tonight,
Since the theme you leave to me,
The sweetest and best, my heart's delight,
For the burden, dear, is of thee;
And though short the song,
The story is long
As a human life can be.

For love is the best of all refrains,
The dearest the heart may hear,
And welcome as ever summer rains,
Descending the earth to cheer;
And the love I sing
Is the love I bring,
For my life, to thee, my dear!

This is the song of my heart tonight,
Its chambers with joy resound,
And warm and free is the mellow light
That falleth on all around.
Let thy blessing be,
Dearest heart, on me
And the love that we have found.

Iron Freight Cars.

A New York company is now making railroad freight cars of iron, for which many advantages are claimed. It is said that they are lighter than wooden cars, and yet have a capacity of 60,000 to 100,000 pounds of freight. The cost of repairs is claimed to be very light, and when they have worn out the material can still be sold for scrap iron. "This," the Manufacturers' Record thinks, "opens up the possibility of a new industry for the South. With cheap iron of the best quality at hand, the South could no doubt make iron cars at a lower cost than any other place in the country."

THE ELECTION.

—Halls majority in this county is 407. Price's majority in this county for senator 173. Boyd's majority in white 175.

As we go to press' the returns come in from Dawson, which gives Col. Price 79. Col. Boyd, 130. Col. Graham, 533.

Col. Graham is the Senator by a small majority.

CAPT. FRANK W. HALL OUR REPRESENTATIVE.

The election, on Wednesday last, passed off without any disturbance, whatever, and Capt. Frank W. Hall has been declared our Representative in preference to Mr. J. T. Grindle, by one of the most handsome majorities that has ever been given to man in our county. There seemed to be no party issue but a universial uprising of the people to send a representative man, and in the person of Mr. Hall, they say by their votes, that they have found him. In business qualifications, he has no superior, and his popularity in business circles is unquestionable while his general appearance will not be excelled by any member of the general assembly. Capt. Hall, in behalf of his responsibility and we believe and feel, that he will make us a representative which will be of great credit to himself and benefit to his constituents.

He is the choice of the people. He is our representative. We are satisfied and hope that the predictions enumerated in this article will fully be maintained by him.

PICKENS COURT.—We learn from a private source that Hardy Perdew, who cut Capt. Sam Tate, severly, a few weeks ago has been tried and found guilty of an assault and attempt to murder and sentenced to five years in the Penitentiary of this State. The difficulty occurred at Capt. Tate's store near the Marble works in Pickens county, where liquor is sold. It appears from the statement of our informant that Perdew took the part of Will Hampton, who was drunk and who Mr. Tate was kicking, and no longer than an exchange of words Mr. Tate received a severe blow from Mr. Perdew, with a knife inflicting an argly gash on Mr. Tate's face breast and right arm. Mr. Tate is up going about his business and Mr. Perdew goes to the Penitentiary to suffer for his attempt to kill. Liquor; liquor. When will men learn how dangerous it is to loiter about dram shops and engage in using theis poisonous drug. When? Oh. When?

☞We find the following items in the Elijay Courier:

The editor attended the Sam Jones Tabernacle meeting in Cartersville last week. We heard some good preaching and the best singing in our lives. There were 6,000 people on the grounds during Sunday.

Mr. T. W. Beshers and Miss Effie Simmons of Jasper were happily married last week in that place by Rev. A. C. Thomas. We offer our congratulations to the couple, and wish for them nothing but continued happiness and success.

When our high interest candidate for the Senate departs this life, we want to suggest the following pitaph, to place over his political grave:

"There lies old "twenty per cent"
The more he had the more he lent
The more he made the more he saved,
The more he got the more he craved,
Great God, can such a man be saved?"

THE SALVATION ARMY.—On Sunday night last we visited the Salvation Army exercises at Stringer's Opera House in Gainesville, Ga. A large number of people, of all classes were in attendance, and we thought that the churches certainly, must have been slimly attended; but we learned afterwards that the churches received their usual congregations. There are at this time, a great many people in Gainesville, and the Salvation Army, is being visiting by that class of people who rarely attend churches, and a more orderly or attentive crowd of listeners, we never saw congregated together.

The intense interest manifested is an evidence of an unsettled mind as to the genuine intent of their organization, who have for their object the salvation of the souls of men, founded upon the doctrine of Christ and his followers. The Christain cannot doubt the laudible objects taught by them; but doubt will arise in his mind whether it is genuine earnestness, or whether it is an entertainment gotten up on a noble foundation, by men and woman who have nothing to do, to obtain a living at the hands of those, who are striving with money might and soul to further the same interests, for which they claim for their object.

Their mode of worship is such that it will attract large crowds for their music is excellent and their every manœuvre in their worship is such as to elicit strict attention by their audience. There is a Col. commanding with Captains and Scouts, and they in turn interspersed with music and salvation songs, come to the front of the stage and deliver on experience exhortation, and some of them with much earnestness.

We give to these people all the Christian sympathy of our nature and must say that all those who visit and become interested in their worship ought to give them help in order that they may meet the expenses that every day accrue. They have bewildered us and we turn them over to themselves and their maker to solve the problem.

A LITTLE BIT OF HISTORY

Mr. Picket has another charge to the effect that Mr, Candler tried to get pensions for a whole regiment of bushwhackers.

Mr. Candler in replying to this begins by saying that he was shot five times in the war and the first shot was fired by a bushwhacker, and he hasn't any use for bushwhackers.

Here he brings in a parenthesis, which gives the audience to understand that he dont like bushwhackers in politics any better than any other sort, and that the independents are the bushwhackers he refers to.

In regard to the bushwhackers, Mr. Candler read a letter from the secretary of war to show that the regiment in question was regularly mustered into service in 1864, as the First Georgia Federal regiment, under the orders of General Thomas armed and equipped under the command of James G. Brown, and put to guard the country along the Western and Atlantic railroad. Mr. Candler says that they were afterwards captured by General Wofford, and were treated by him as organized troops and not as bushwhackers.

He says that the men who served in that regiment petitioned congress to pension them, and though they were republicans, he was their representative in congress and as such was bound to present their petition, though not bound to favor the pension. As a matter of fact, he said the secretary of war had reported that the regiment, not being in the regular army, could not be pensioned, and the matter was dropped.

It would be hard to describe all the issues of this lively campaign for their name is legion, and they are somewhat varied in different parts of the district.

TWO MEN SHOT.

The Coroner's Jury Upholds the Negro Who Pulled the Trigger.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 30.—A terrible tragedy occurred this afternoon four miles from this city at Gill's station. J. D. Smith, William W. Eastman and J. E. Jordan, all residents of Memphis, took a trip on a dummy engine to the station. Smith seeing a mule on the road, said he thought he would take a ride.

BEGINNING OF THE TROUBLE.

As he approached the animal James Conley, a negro, called out ordering him to leave the mule alone, at the same time applying opprobrious epithets. Conley was seated in his yard. Smith and Eastman started toward him. Jordan remonstrated, but they entered the yard. Conley ran into the house and shut the door. A second after ward a shotgun was thrust through a window and discharged.

EASTMAN INSLTANTLY KILLED.

The contents struck Eastman in the head, killing him instantly. Smith ran to Eastman, and as he was bending over his dead body the other barrel of the gun was discharged. He was struck in the left side with several buckshot and mortally wounded. Conley, after the shooting, fled. The jury of inquest exponerated Conley, it being proven that he was defending his house from assault.

The Memphis Appeal suggests that the fact that all the persons so far attacked in Jackson, Miss., have been employed in or about the railroad depot now under construction, and therefore near the exposed and disturbed sewer, shows it is possible that this was merely the indus on which the poison, or seed, or microbes of yellow fever from some traveling refugee had fastend and developed, those most exposed to the sewer being the first to fall victims to the disease.

A Bloody Republican Riot.

From the Macon Telegraph.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 28.—At the headquarters of the republican county committee last evening, while returns from primary elections were being counted, W. J. Harrington, a notorious character about the city, entered a protest against the returns of one district. Some one to stop talking, when Harrington drew his revolver and began abusing J. Kelly, fire commissioner. Some unknown person then fired a shot from the rear and general confusion ensued and several shots were fired promiscuously. David Donahue was shot in the heart and died in a few minutes. A. Christenson was shot in the chest and will die. Kelly and Harrington were also shot but not fatally.

TATE SPRINGS, Tenn., July 4, 1888.
The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gentlemen. Inclosed please find an order for six bottles of your most valuable medicine. And in sending this order let me tell you why I do so. Seven years ago I contracted an exceedingly bad case of blood poison. I tried a physician, the best at command, but secured no benefit. My throat began to get sore, and my body covered with sores and ulcers. Going from dba to worse, I felt that my grave must be reached in the near future. I gave up the doctors treatment and with a dispairing hope I commenced taking your medicine. I began to improve from the first bottle, and in a short time the ulcers healed and my skin cleared off and was entirely well. One year ago a case of catarrh developed in my system. The physician done his best. But could not cure me; but two bottles of Swift's Specific gave me permanent relief. J. H. ROBISON.

One Black Drop.

Byron was wise when he wrote, "A drop of Ink may make a million think." This is indeed true when the black fluid is used to enlighten the world on the merits of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Let consumptives everywhere hear the glad tidings. Try it all, who breathe with pain and toss in fever through the long night hours. You will find the cough gone and sleep as balmy as a child's will visit your pillow. You will thank the drop of ink that brought the message of mercy to you.

$500 Reward.

So confident are the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy in their ability to cure chronic nasal catarrh, no matter how bad or of how long standing that they offer, in good faith, the above reward for a case which they cannot cure. Remedy sold by druggist at 50 cents.

SHOT THROUGH THE HEART

A Negro Desperado Killed While Flourishing a Revolver.

From the Macon Telegraph.

SPARTA, Sept. 27.—In a difficulty yesterday at Linston, twelve miles south of this place, John Larry, a desperate and dangerous negro, was killed by Mr. Chas. Stanley.

The facts as your reporter got them are these: There had been a difficulty in the field between young Mr. Stanley and the negro in the morning, whereupon the the negro was dismissed and told to come to the house at noon for his pay. At dinner time he came to the front gate and insolently demanded his money. Stanley told him to remain at the gate and he would bring the money to him, that his father was sick in the house and did not want any fuss on the place. The negro swore he would come in, drew a razor and started for Stanley, who made a dash for the house, the negro following in close pursuit. Stanley gained the front room, seized a pistol from the mantel, wheeled and fired on his assailant as he was ascending the step. The negro immediately turned and ran to the gate, dashed outside and fell dead.

The ball penetrated his heart, and he died as soon as he fell.

The whole community justifies young Stanley, and the negroes, who dreaded Larry, declared Stanley made the best shot of his life when he killed the desperado.

A Murderer Respited.

From the Macon Telegraph.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 28.—Ephraim Mays sentenced to be hanged at Edgefield to day, for the murder of Jake Burt, an aged deaf mute, was respited by the governor until Oct. 16. Louise Burt and Chaney Burt, the murdered man's wife and daughter, were also under the sentence of death for complicity in the same murder, but the governor pardoned Chaney and commuted the sentence of Louise to life imprisonment.

THROUGH A TRESTLE.

One Man Killed and Five Badly Injured Near Goodwater.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Sept. 30.—About 2 o'clock this afternoon the railroad officials at this city received information that a frightful accident had occurred on the Columbus and Western railway near Goodwater, 100 miles from Columbus, in which a freight train went through a trestle and one man was instantly killed and several wounded. A relief train left at once with Drs. Grimes and walker aboard.

The train returned late to-night with the remains of Charles Webster of this city, who was on the engine when it went through the trestle. The body was cut nearly in two.

THE INJURED.

William Keene, the engineer, Morgan Phillips, the flagman, Joseph Hall, the conductor, and two negro train hands were all badly hurt It is feared that the two train hands will die.

The two physicians are still at the scene of the wreck attendgin the wounded. Transfer of passengers and baggage will have to be made for a few days.

Sixteen Lives Lost by Fire.

From the Macon Telegraph.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 28.—Sixteen persons perished in a fire at Cronstadt yesterday. The building destroyed was a lofty wooden tenement. The stair case was burned away and a number of inmates leaped from the windows to the street to escape the flames and were mortally injured.

THE DEADLY GIN.

A Boy Caught in the Belting and a Man's Arm Torn Off.

From the Macon Telegraph.

ATHENS, Sept. 27.—News was received in Athens yesterday that Alex. Jones, an 8-year old boy, while playing at a gin in Bowman, became entangled in a belt. He was twirled between the belt and pulley and thrown in a mangled heap, on the floor. No hope is expressed for his recovery.

A few minutes afterwards Mr. D. W. Glover, while examining the same gin, to see how the boy became entangled, got his arm caught in the same belt, and in an instant it was litiera ly torn from his body.

Mr. J. J. Thomas, who was stricken with paralysis by a fall from a hammock, is seriously ill at his home in Cobbham.

Prof. E. C. Branson, superintendent of the Athens free school, left yesterday for West Point, where he will be married to-day.

For Life.—Oscar Casidy, who killed Fletcher Garwood, in Pickens Co., last June was tried in Pickens Court last week, and found guilty of murder, but on a recommendation of mercy by the jury he was sent to the Penitentiary for life.

The Herald adds: Garwoood is in eternity, Cassidy goes to prison and hard labor for life, while the devil waves his banner stained with human blood and whiskey. When will our young men learn that whiskey, bad company, and the devil are copartners in business?

We hopes that the married men who were present at that house of ill fame on the eventful night when Garwood was killed, will hereafter be found at home with their families.

Dr. Geo. F. Brooks of Boston, a graduate of Harvard College, says: "I have no hesitation in recommending in the strongest terms Faith Whitcomb's Remedy, and as a physician I am both surprised and gratified at the favorable results which have followed.

"Do not trifle with life; if you have any symptoms of consumption, that terrible disease which takes off one-third of our population, try Faith Whitcomb's Balsam. The immediate effects will induce you to continue it until you are cured of a malady which, unchecked, inevitably leads to death."

SCIENTIFIC SCRAPS.

The increase of cancer is due to the carnivorous diet of the past generation.

A French investigator has come to the conclusion that women have a larger proportion of brown eyes than men.

Sir John Lubbock of England has studied the habits of ants for twenty-two years to discover that their average life is only thirty-five days.

Mount Kenia in Zanzibar is declared by its first ascendant, Count Teleki, to be higher than the neighboring mountain, Kilima-Njavo, which is rated at 18,700 feet high.

Signals flashed from an arc lamp upon the clouds at the Cape of Good Hope, Africa, have been seen at a distance of fifty miles. This method of signaling may prove useful at sea, especially for vessels in danger.

A physician recommends that all the wood used in the interior construction of houses and all the plain surfaces of plaster should be thoroughly oiled or varnished, so that the power of absorption of foul air and gases should be destroyed.

Dr. W. H. Gardner, United States army, reports having treated many cases of sea sickness with oxalate of cerium, in ten, fifteen or twenty grain doses, every two or three hours. He believes that 75 per cent. of all cases that occur will be cured by this remedy.

One of the English regiments is experimenting with a machine called a centrecycle, which has four small wheels a foot in diameter, and one large one in the center. It is said that the invention makes climbing a hill as easy for a cycler as rolling off a log.

Quicksand is composed chiefly of small particles of mica mixed largely with water. The mica is so smooth that the fragments slip upon each other with the greatest facility, so that any heavy body which displaces them will sink and continue to sink until a solid bottom is reached.

A remedy for tender feet is cold water (about two quarts), two tablespoonfuls of ammonia and one tablespoonful of bay rum. Sit with the feet immersed for ten minutes, gently throwing the water over the limbs upward to the knee. Then rub dry with a crash towel, and all the tired feeling is gone. This recipe is good for a sponge-bath also.

The very best nourishment for invalids and children is the juice pressed from a steak or mutton chop thoroughly trimmed and boiled about five minutes. The meat for this purpose should be cut at least three-quarters of an inch thick. The juice may be extracted from the meat by a lemon-squeezer or a meat-press, which comes for this purpose.

Scarlet fever is a specific poison which emanates from the person of the patient and can be caused by no other means. Diphtheria is contagious, but may arise from fermenting filth, etc. Typhoid fever and Asiatic cholera are not directly communicable from person to persan, but are spread by the dejecta of their victims, which contaminate the water supply.

According to geographical computations, the minimum age of the earth since the formations of the primitive soils is 21,000,000 years, allowing 6,700,000 years for the primordial formations, 6,400,000 years for the primary age, 2,300,000 years for the secondary age, 400,000 years for the tertiary age and 100,000 years since the appearance of man upon the globe.

Priceite is a borate of lime and was named 20 years ago by Professors Dana and Silliman in honor of Professor Thomas Price of San Francisco. Borax is made by boiling it with carbonate of soda. A discovery of priceite in large quantity is just reported from Curry County, Oregon. Deposits of the same mineral are found in Turkey and shipped to London where it sells as "Turkey borate."

Five persons were imprisoned by the caving in of a wall at a quarry at Chancelade, near Perigeux, France, recently, and there were no means at hand to rescue them. To find out where they were, a shaft 12 inches in diameter was bored, down which was slid a tube, near the end of which was a small camera surrounded by a battery of electric lights. With this apparatus a number of negatives were taken and the effect of the disaster shown, even to the faces of two corpses. It was thus known that the men were dead, and that effort to succor them would be useless.

America's Gifts to the World.

The following are said to be the sixteen American inventions of world-wide adoption: The cotton gin, planing machine, grass mower and reaper, rotary printing press, steam navigation, hot-air machine, sewing machine, the India-rubber industry, machine manufacture of horseshoes, the sand blast for graving, gauge lathe, grain elevator, artificial ice-making on a large scale, the electro magnet in its practical application, and the telephone.

Fell in Love with Eagle-Eye.

The talk of Paris just now is a romance in real life, of which the heroine is a young Englishwoman and the hero no less a person than Eagle-Eye, one of the braves of Mexican Joe. Joe and his redskins have come over to the big annual fair of Neuilly, outside Paris, where they daily and nightly amaze and amuse Parisians by their diabolical yells, their horsemanship and their prairie pranks generally. It appears that during one of the representations given by the troupe in England a young lady who was present became enamoured of Eagle-Eye. She shortly afterwards disappeared from her home, and her parents learned on inquiry that she had gone away to France with the Indian troupe. A detective was sent to Paris, and he, accompanied by the Commissary of Police of the Neuilly District, went to the camp of the redskins at the Porte-Maillot, where the young lady was discovered in the tent of Eagle-Eye. M. Martin the Commissary, and the English detective had much trouble with the savage, who assumed a threatening aspect, and would have shown fight but for the intervention of Mexican Joe himself. Eagle-Eye was almost foaming at the mouth, and threatened to kill the Commissary if he led the young lady away. The detective, however, taking advantage of the general confusion, quickly seized the girl in his arms, ran with her to a vehicle, and was speedily driven off, leaving M. Martin to deal with the redskin as best he could.

Simplifying Matters.

The bridesmaid and the usher have gone out of fashion for the present. Stylish weddings will be arranged so that the bride and groom shall have no rivals for the attention of the onlookers. The regulation society wedding has become of late such an expensive thing that more than one young man, matrimonially inclined, has dreaded the bill he must pay for a supper to his ushers, presents to the same etc. And the father who has to foot the bills pertaining to a daughter's marriage will be glad to have the extravagance of the ceremony reduced to a minimum.

It was his first visit to the city. As he stood on the curbstone shaking his sides with laughter, he was accosted by a policeman, who said: "What's the fun, stranger?" "Fun! Can't you see it? Just look how that thing (pointing to a watering cart) leaks; why, the man won't have a drop left when he gets home."

Symptoms of Catarrh.

Dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak, watery, and inflamed; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice is changed and has a nasal twang; the breath is offensive; smell and taste are impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility. If you have all, or any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from Nasal Catarrh. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, or less understood, or more unsuccessfully treated, by physicians. Five hundred dollars reward is offered by the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, for a case of catarrh which they cannot cure. Remedy sold by druggists, at only 50 cents.

"Electric prostration" is a new disease. It troubles workers under the electric light.

The Mother's Friend, used a few weeks before confinement, lessens the pain and makes labor quick and comparatively easy.

English capital is buying up American breweries, and will organize a great trust.

Woman's Modesty.

Many women are prevented by feelings of delicacy from consulting a physician in those disorders arising from functional derangement of her peculiarly delicate organism, and the most serious results are often caused by this neglect. To such persons Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is an especial boon, as it offers a sure and safe cure for all those distressing disorders to which women are peculiarly subject, while it saves a modest girl or woman from the embarrassment of a personal consultation with a physician. "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. See guarantee on bottle wrapper.

Life is too short to be spent in nursing animosity or registering wrong.

"Polhemus, you look like a ghost. Have you had a spell of sickness?" "No, Magruder, there's nothing the matter with me but my microscope." "Your microscope? What do you mean?" "I was a happy man, Magruder, until my last birthday. My wife made me a present of a microscope, and in an evil hour I took it and began examining the articles of food we eat and drink. Magruder, I've lived for two weeks on distilled water. It's the only thing that isn't full of nameless horrors."

How to Overcome the Dangers of Exposure.

Francis O'Reilly, the well known livery man of No. 18 Prince street, New York, says of ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS:

"For the last forty-two years I have been engaged in the livery and hacking business. I am greatly aided by my four boys. We are much exposed to the weather, and we have found ALLCOCK'S PLASTERS of very great service. We use them as chest protectors, placing one on the chest and one on the pit of the stomach. They not only ward off the cold, but act as a tonic.

We are frequently affected with rheumatism, kinks in the back, and pains in the side; but one or two of ALLCOCK'S PLASTERS quickly cure us. My wife and daughter have been using ALLCOCK'S PLASTERS for weak back and think the world of them. I have now been using them for twenty years, and always have a box in the house."

BLOOD AND BRAIN.

Pure blood is what oils the machinery of life, eases every movement of the body, removes stiffness of the joints, drives out pain from the nerves, stimulates the brain, protects the liver and kidneys from irritation, enables physical exertion without fatigue, prolongs life, and makes men and women perfect in health and feature. Good blood and good brain are inseparable. Aim to keep the blood pure by using the only true blood remedy, B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm.)

Miss S. Tomlinson, Atlanta, Ga., says:

Rheumatism "For many years I have been afflicted with rheumatism combined with severe kidney troubles, indigestion and nervous prostration. Several physicians were employed and numerous patent medicines resorted to without benefit. At last I began the use of B. B. B., and its effect was like magic. Rheumatic pains ceased, my kidneys were relieved, and my constitution improved at once."

Z. T. Hallerton, Macon, Ga., writes:

Hot Springs "Three years ago I contracted a blood poison. I applied to a physician at once, and his treatment came near killing me. I employed an old physician and then went to Kentucky. I then went to Hot Springs and remained two months, but nothing seemed to cure me permanently, although temporary relief was given me. I returned home a ruined man physically, with but little prospect of ever getting well. I was persuaded to try B. B. B., and to my utter astonishment it quickly healed every ulcer."

W. C. McGaughey, Webb City, Ark., writes:

Bad Blood "I owe the comfort of my life to a use of B. B. B. I was troubled with blood poison for five or six years, and found no relief equal to that given by this valuable remedy."

Mrs. Emma Griffiths, Unitia, Tenn., writes:

Scrofula "The doctors said my boy twelve years old had scrofula. His knees were drawn up and joints were stiff, and for three years he had been unable to walk. One bottle of B. B. B. has done him so much good he can now walk, and his pain has ceased. Its action on my boy has been pronounced most wonderful." (5)

COMER'S GUARANTEED CHICKEN
Cholera Cure!

After using this medicine for the past ten years, and never finding a case of Chicken Cholera that it would not cure, I feel no hesitancy in offering it for sale with a guarantee that it will cure every chicken that has the Cholera with life enough to eat a particle of the medicine. Your dealer will REFUND THE MONEY, IF IT FAILS TO CURE. Please read the following TESTIMONIALS.

Judge HOWELL COBB, who is authority on all points pertaining to the poultry yard, publishes the following letter in the Southern Farmer: "COMER'S GUARANTEED CHICKEN CHOLERA CURE—This Summer I have had the first touch of cholera in my yard for several years. I lost my best cock and several hens. My neighbor, Mr. James T. Comer, of, Athens, Ga., heard of my trouble and sent me, to try, a package of his Cholera Cure. When I used this medicine I had two hens in collapse condition, too far gone to eat and about to die. Several others were affected. I fed the remedy in food, as directed, to the flock. I gave the two hens named the medicine in solution. One of these died, the other is now well. In twenty-four hours she was relieved, and in one week entirely well. The other affected fowls all recovered health and vigor in a few days. No other case developed. All my flock are now well. It is a month now since the disease disappeared. I believe the remedy of my friend Comer saved me from a destructive mishap of the worst destroyer of fowls.

HOWELL COBB.

HARMONY GROVE, GA., August 22, 1887.—This is to certify that I have given Comer's Guaranteed Chicken Cholera Cure a trial, and can safely recommend it as a certain cure for this fatal disease among fowls.

W. J. GOSS.

ATHENS, GA., Mar. 7, 1888.—MR. J. T. COMER—Dear Jim: When I got the package of Cholera Cure from you my fowls were affected with something that I supposed was the cholera in its first stages. We gave them only a few doses, and since that time they seem perfectly healthy, and are now in splendid condition. Yours truly,

W. C. ORR.

HEARMONY GROVE, GA., March 8 1888.—J. T. COMER, Athens, Ga., can recommend your C. G. C. C, C, to any one. It is all you claim for it. Respectfully, R. L. HARDMAN.

Blossoms Changed His Life.

"Oh, Frank, how lovely this air is! How I pity the people in the city! To think anyone should live in a city from choice!"

"I wouldn't damp your enthusiasm, Kate, but, after all, a man does not see much of the country; he is only like a chicken which comes home to roost, and everyone does not delight in catching the train twice each day—I can't say I'm quite reconciled to it myself. But I must be off! Good-bye, both of you," and giving his young wife and little daughter a parting kiss, Mr. Travis ran for the train, whose warning shriek could be heard in the distance.

Kate Travis lingered on the porch. It was her first experience of a whole year in the country, and every day brought new delights. She had discovered "pussy-willows" down by the brook, and had learned how warmly Dame Nature blankets the tender grapevine leaves. She had found the shy violets' and anemones' favorite hiding-places, and decked her little home with laurel, and revelled in the delights of lettuce and raddishes of her "own raising." This particular May morning was a day in which the mere fact that one was alive was a joy, and as the young wife looked at the fleecy clouds, the hillsides bright with rye, and the orchard one mass of lovely blossoms, she sighed for very excess of happiness.

"I wish I had given Frank a branch of apple-blossoms—they would have brightened up that dreary office," thought Mrs. Travis. She, like the rest of us, often had these after-impulses, but somehow this one would not be shaken off. Kate Travis was not a [illegible] woman, yet such a turn of her that she feared to resist it. Just before the starting of the next train, a happy thought struck her, and, donning her garden hat, having hastily gathered three or four beautiful sprays of the blossoms, she hurried to the train. Yes, Jack Dorset was there—he took the later train quite often, Kate thought, regretfully, for she knew by many little signs that Jack was not quite so attentive to business, not quite so true and manly as he had been.

Jack, on his side, watched the bright, eager face as it came near. "That Travis is a lucky fellow," he thought. "After all, what a fool a fellow is to waste time or money on cards and theatres!"

"Oh, Jack!" exclaimed Kate, breathlessly—"I beg your pardon, Mr. Dorset! Could you drop into my husband's office and give him these blossoms? This branch is for you."

Jack had only time to seize the flowers and call out his thanks for his share before he was whirled away in that relentless fate—the train.

There were two reasons why Jack Dorset had taken this later train, though even to himself he acknowledged but one—that, as business was slack, it was just as well to sleep a little later this spring weather. But hidden far out of sight was another reason and Jack had not been well seated when that reason became apparent.

"Hello! Thought you'd be on this train. Come along in the smoker; we're just making up a hand."

"No, thank you," said Jack, with a decision that surprised himself quite as much as his comrade.

"Why, what's up! Turned rusty? Come, you'll have your revenge on me today. I shouldn't wonder if you won enough to have a lark to-night."

The perfume from the apple-blossoms had given Jack a wonderful pleasure, not unmixed with bitterness, and when his comrade leaned over to whisper the last sentence confidentially, the odor of stale tobbacco and liquor seemed unbearable. Jack fairly blushed with manly shame.

"No, no!" he said; "I'll have none of that sort of thing this morning," and, with a sudden realization of his own helplessness and this bad fellow's power over him, Jack deliberately walked over to old Deacon Taft and seated himself by him.

The deacon was surprised. Young men did not take much to him. Perhaps he knew he was, at times, the mark for their jokes. But the flowers helped matters.

"Them's beauties, I do declare," said the deacon, "and I'm glad to see a young fellow like you think enough of 'em to carry 'em to town. Why, I remember when a flower just changed my hull future."

"Tell me about it, Mr. Taft," said Jack with a sense of having escaped from imminent peril.

"Wa'al, I don't know as I've told a person about Mary's rose in years, and of any body had told me five minutes ago that I'd ha' been telling it to you, I'd ha' just laughed at 'em, 't would seemed that ridikerlous. But seein' them apple-blossoms has brought it all back mighty strong, and I feel sorter drawn to you, Jack Dorset, seein' you with 'em."

Jack felt almost as if he ought to make some disclaimer; yet surely he deserved some credit for turning from temptation. After a few moments the Deacon began:

"I was a boy about fourteen—I s'pose you think old Deacon Taft has been country born and bred; but at that time I'd never seen the country; never seen grass I could tromp on; never seen birds 'cept in cages; never seen anything—I was goin' to say—but misery, dirt and poverty. But then, that wouldn't be true, for there was one lovely thing before my eyes, night and morning, and that was my sister Mary. She was a beautiful girl, but she'd been sick for a long time, and so, though she did all she could, she couldn't do much more than keep herself sweet and clean. Mother had died when I was a baby, and I suppose it was the hard work and father's drinking that had sickened the poor girl. But I was tellin' you about that day. It was a hot June day. Father had been special hard on us, and the last thing he'd done was to get me a place in a drinking-saloon, where there was a lot of gambling goin' on, too. My boy, you're an innocent, well-brought-up young fellow" (Jack lifted the mass of blossoms to his face, and their delicate pink seemed reflected in his cheeks), but if you ever knew what I know of the wickedness that cards and liquor may lead to, you'd not wonder at the old deacon's 'narrowness.' Well, as I was a-sayin', my father'd found me the place, and I'd [illegible] a great plan in my head. Mary was just crazy over flowers. A missionary lady had brought her a bunch once and again, and the way she doted on 'em was just surprisin'. Dear, dear, how often I've thought of Mary when I see the youngsters pullin' flowers and throwin' 'em away!"

The deacon paused a moment. Jack broke off a bit of the blossoms, and, with the gentleness of a woman, fastened it in the old farmer's coat.

"Thankee! thankee! I never could pick fruit-blossoms myself, but I don't know but flowers is as much needed as fruit. Well, as I was a-sayin', I had a plan. I had seen a lovely rose-bush in a pot at the corner grocery, and meant to buy that for Mary. I priced it; 'twas just twenty-five cents; and I'd watched every day and no one had bought it. Now, this morning I meant to buy it and keep it in the saloon till I'd get off, late at night. But when I got to the grocery the rose-bush warn't there!

"I've had a good many dis'p'intments one way and another, but I don't know's ever I felt one wuss. The groceryman was talkin' to a big rough-lookin' fellow, but I was that eager I couldn't wait, and I just rushed up and said: 'You ain't sold that rose-bush?'

"I guess I looked mighty airnest, for they both looked at me, and then the man said: 'Yes, bubby, I sold it yesterday afternoon. But there's other flowers—this man's just bargaining for me to buy some of his'n.'

"'Are you so fond of flowers, sonny?' said the strange man.

"I told him I wanted the rose for my sister, who was sick, and then I said I had told Mary how pretty the rose was, and, though she didn't know I was to get it, I'd meant to buy it—I'd borrowed the money from Tom 'cause I wouldn't be paid off till midnight.

"'Midnight! A little fellow like you!' exclaimed the big man. 'And where do you work till midnight?'

"'At the big saloon around the corner,' I said. 'I ain't so young—I'm fourteen!'

"'And working in a saloon? What does that sister o' your'n say to that?' said the big one.

"'She feels mighty bad about it. She cries and cries. But I tell her I wouldn't drink, not if they killed me, nor I won't play cards; and tonight I'll have three dollars for Mary.'

"The groceryman had gone to another customer. The big stranger stood lookin' me over for a minute or so, and then he laid his hand on my shoulder and said: 'How'd Mary like you to live on a farm, sonny?'

"I told him that that was just what made Mary feel so bad. A lady had told her to pray about everything, and Mary had prayed and prayed that I might go to work on a farm—as if there were farms in New York City!

"'Now, see here, sonny,' said the man, 'you just look in that covered wagon and pick out the flowers you'd like for Mary, and then tell me where she lives, and I'll go and see her.'

"You'll believe I stepped up to that wagon pretty lively. It was just full of roses—little pots and big ones. But I hadn't a minute to spare, and I pulled out a beautiful pink rose that made me think of Mary's cheeks at night, and told him where we lived; and then I just flew around the corner. I was late, and the man was mighty cross. The police had been in the night before, and I got hard words and some blows, but I didn't care—Mary would have that rose! I haven't time to tell you how the men took a fancy to make me drink that evening, and how my own father, half tipsy as he was, helped 'em on; but at last it was time for me to leave, and I asked for my pay. Jack, just think how I felt when that saloon-keeper told me my father had taken my pay in liquor! I was stiff and sore—I had been up late for seven nights; and now I hadn't a cent for Mary!

"Dear, dear! How it all comes back to me! Well, I got home somehow, and crept up softly, hoping she was asleep but she was sitting up in bed, her cheeks like the rose by her side and her eyes shining. I just threw myself on her bed and cried—though I was a boy—and she had sense enough to let me. But pretty soon I began to listen to what she was saying and she certainly had news. The big man was coming for me the next day and I was to live at his house. He hadn't chick nor child and his wife would be glad to have a boy around, besides his needing help.

"Well, the long and the short of it was, I went and I stayed; and when the dear old man and his wife died, they treated me like an own child and left me all."

"And Mary?"

[illegible] last long. Yet perhaps the fruit has come in place of the blossoms—I wouldn't ha' been much use in this world if it warn't for Mary."

Jack sat silent looking at the blossoms. Was not fruit coming from that far-off life even now? Another life was changed that day by means of a flower—only a blossom picked before it could fructify, but shall we say "What a pity?"

From that day Jack Dorset dated two friendships. Before long Deacon Taft knew the story of another flower, for Jack confessed to the old farmer his progress on the downward road, and how a branch of apple-blossoms had stopped him, while Kate Travis and her husband learned to look for Jack's coming as one of the simple pleasures of their quiet home, little dreaming how God-given was the impulse to send the apple-blossoms to town.—[Christian Union.

The Patient South American Burro.

The burro is a very interesting being, with his serious face, his contentment under a hard lot, his patience under a load, and his intelligence, writes a South American correspondent of the Commercial Gazette. His living costs nothing. Turned out at night on the "mesa," he finds it among the sage and other weeds. He can go long without water. The tradition is that he can live on nothing, and there is considerable practical faith in it. In the street, in front of the supply stores, a score of them may be on of a morning, in a bunch, loading up. Their burdens make transportation comical—a cook stove balanced on the other side by boxes; an iron wheelbarrow, its handles nearly touching ground, balanced by boxes and sacks; iron rails, one on each side, running forward of him and dragging behind on the ground; all the miscellaneous materials of mine working and of the living supplies bound on his back in queer shapes whose bulk makes him look still smaller. The adjusting and fastening of these loads is an art. The burros are also said to have an art of grunting heavily while the load is being put on, to cut it short. Loaded up, off they go in a bunch, urged by a man on horseback, until they reach the mountain trail, when they fall into single file, an experienced one in the lead.

"And you saw cordwood for a living?" "Yes, sir, and it is an honorable employment." "No doubt, no doubt." "Yes, sir, so honorable that my labors are universally applauded." "Applauded!" "Yes. My work is always on cord."

THE BLUE RIDGE RAILROAD.

Now for Atlanta and Another Route.

Last week while brother Pickett was thundering his anathema upon the organized Democracy in our Court House, but few people knew that another railroad was being worked up to connect Dahlonega direct with Atlanta via Dawsonville and Alpharetta.

It is a truth, and Gainesville is to be bycotted or words like that; for it seems that during the last session of the Legislature a charter was obtained for the Blue Ridge railroad to start from Atlanta and make for North Carolina line near Clay County.

"This is the way we long have sought," and if the men who have this scheme in hand will act promptly it will receive the united help of the co's of Milton, Forsyth, Dawson, Lumpkin, Union and Towns. Our people want to rid themselves of the tyranny of Gainesville neighbors and the Richmond & Danville railroad. Let the good work go on.

The charter members met here on that day, and effected an organization by accepting the charter, [illegible] directors. This is decidedly an enterprise of the city of Atlanta and a very important one to her, too. It will pass through one of the best and least developed sections of the state, and a great variety of soil and productions—untold mineral and timber resources and water, power not to be excelled in America

This contemplated line will pass through the counties of Milton, Forsyth, Dawson, Lumpkin, Union, Towns and on to connect, either with the old grade of the Blue Ridge or the N.East'n from Athens, whose terminus is Webster N. C., to connect with the North Carolina Western Extension. Now is the time and the accepted time for the citizens to rise up and organise in favor of this great railroad scheme, and grant such aid as will help to facilitate this grand effort, in the right of way, subscriptions, &c.

[COMMUNICATED.]

Mr. Editor:—Every citizen of Lumpkin county, almost, will tell you that he is in favor of a railroad to Dahlonega, from some railroad point. And, now, we want to know why it is that nearly every rai road project in Georgia has been a success except the one to Lumpkin county? Has the Gainesville and Dahlonega railroad fallen into incapable hands? Or is its failure owing to difficulties which its officers could not overcome? If its' want of success is due to the latter cause, lets look at the difficulties in the way, and if they cannot be removed let us begin to look in other directions for a railroad.

The route to Gainesville never was desired by many of the people of Lumpkin county. We all know, or ought to have known, that it would be faught by the merchants and business men of Gainesville—many of whom believe that the place depends upon having no other town of consequence, North of it, to take its business away.

It is a notorious fact, that for years, some of the people of Gainesville have opposed Dahlonega at every point. Some of her most reputable citizens have long since repudiated their honest subscriptions to the G & D. R. R—because in their opinion, the building of that road would cripple Gainesville. Every imaginable lie has been concocted and told at Gainesville to prevent summer visitors from going on to Dahlonega. The bad roads, the dangerous bridges and rivers, the awful means of transporting passengers, have all been appealed to in order to keep travelers in Gainsville, even stooping to circulating the report that Dahlonega had been visited by some incurable fever which was carrying off its citizens by the dozen, almost, daily.

These things have been carried on until the people of Lumpkin county have become indifferent whether that railroad is built or not. Years of patience on our part have had no good effect on the people at the other end of the line.

Now, if there is such stubborn opposition to our county, as well as to Dahlonega, on the part of Gainesville, why should we not cast about for a railroad that will reach us from Atlanta and the West without going to or through Gainesville.

The route from Ball Ground on the Marietta and North Georgia railroad to Dahlonega, has been chartered for several years; but it has not been taken hold of as it should have been. If this route had been "talked up" and the work done on it that has been thrown away on the Gainesville and Dahlonega railroad, we would have had a railroad to a market long ago. It would have developed a far richer country, in every respect, than that which lies between Gainesville and Dahlonega. It would connect Dahlonega with towns that would rejoice in her prosperity instead of putting it down.

There are many citizens of Lumpkin who would be glad if Col. Price, the President of the Gainesville & Dahlonega railroad could make it to his interest to abandon his road, altogether and put his energies in a direction where they will be appre[illegible] would, in a few years, make up all the losses he has heretofore sustained.

Let us show that our county and town belong neither to the merchants of Gainesville or to the Richmond and Danville railroad.

The last named road has been cajoling us for years and promising us help—but it has given no help because its managers believe that the buisness of this section belonged to them by right of discovery.

The merchants of Gainesville except a few, would not help our road because they thought our people could go nowhere else.

Thank God there are other merchants besides those of Gainesville and there are other railroads, than the Richmond & Danville

If Col. Price has no other sources of help than Gainesville and the Richmond & Danville railroad then we are not likely ever to have a railroad from that direction. We admonish him now to abandon his raod and all he has spent and look to a better line than the one he has been working at for so many years. If the people of Dahlonega, and Lumpkin county, are allowed to have a hand in building a railroad we want it to go where it will do the most good.

A diver in San Francisco, who was engaged at $150 a day to go down and examine the machinery of the steamer City of Chester, which was sunk last August, has thrown up job. He took one look at the vesel, and that satisfied him. The first thing that met his eye was the form of a man standing with face and tongue hanging out of his mouth. The body was swollen twice its natural size. Then he saw another victim, on his knees, grasping a third man around the waist. The diver got out of the water, reported his discovery to the officers; and refused to listen to appeals to make another trip.

FREQUENTLY accidents occur in the household which cause burns, cuts, sprains and bruises; for use in such cases Dr. J. H. McLean's Volcanic Oil Liniment has for many years been the constant favorite family remedy. 19

Where to Find Heaven.

There was a Methodist preacher who preached one day on heaven. The next morning he was going down town and he met one of his old wealthy members. This fellow met the preacher, and he said.

"Pastor, you preached a good sermon about heaven. You told me all about heaven, but you never told me where heaven is."

"Ah," said the pastor, "I am glad of the opportunity this morning. I have just come from the hill top yonder. In that cottage there is a member of your church. She is sick in bed with fever; her two little children are sick in the other bed, and she has not got a bit of coal, or a stick of wood, or flour, or sugar, or any bread. If you will go down town and buy fifty dollars' worth of things, nice provisions and send them up to her, and then go up there and say: 'My sister, I have bought these nice provisions in the name of our Lord and Saviour.' You ask for a Bible, and you read the 23 psalm, and you get down on your knees and pray—if you dont' see heaven before you get all through I'll pay the bill."

The next morning he said: "Pastor, I saw heaven, and I spent fifteen minutes in heaven as certainly as you are listening."—Presbyterian.

Charles Diggins a little gingercake colored negro, about 15 years old, about 3 feet tall. He claims to be a native of Houston county, and has been raising considerable sensation among the negroes of Milledgeville by his marvelous manner of preaching the gospel. [illegible] negro's [illegible] great place, who flock to hear him in droves, and shout "amen" at his utterances. He presents quite an odd appearance, walking back and forth behind the tall pulpit, but his earnest and simple appeals find ready reception in the hearts of his congregation whom he sways like a boat in a tempest. He talks very rapidly, and, although he uses very simple language, he never lack for a word. He gave his congregation an imaginary trip to hell one night last week, and wound up his sermon with a picture of heaven. He carried them to the very highest pitch and then exclaimed: "If you get there before I do, tell my saviour I'm coming, too.' At this point the congregation almost unanimously opened a shout that was kept up until near midnight.—[Marietta Journal.

Matters of Interest.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 28, '88. The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Gentlemen—In 1886 I contracted blood poison, and at once sought a physician, who treated me for several months. By his advice I went to Crab Orchard Springs, Ky., where his course of treatment was carefully observed. I recovered, as I thought, but the next spring pimples began to appear on my face and body. These gradually increased to sores and running ulcers. I was advised to try S. S. S., and immediately after taking it I commenced to improve, slowly at first, but more rapidly afterwards, and soon nothing remained to tell of my trouble. My blood is now thoroughly cleansed, and my system free from taint, and I owe my present condition—a perfect cure—to your medicine. I cheerfully give this statement that others who suffered as I have may reap the same benefit.

JUMPED OVER A TRESTLE.

An Engineer Killed and Over Twenty Other People Injured.

From the Macon Telegraph.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 19.—The cannon ball express on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad which left last night, ran into an open switch near the Washington, Pa., depot, about 6:30 o'clock this morning and was precipitated a distance of 10 feet. The train was running at a high rate of speed, and was almost completely wrecked. Engineer James Noonan was instantly killed.

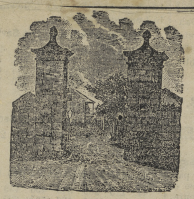

THREE LIKELY TO DIE.

Only engineer James Noonan was killed out right, but Fireman Brown and baggage-master Henry and a colored passenger were more or less badly hurt, but likely to die. As stated before, the accident was caused by a misplaced switch. The train jumped the track and ran into a "Y" near the depot. The curve was so short that the train could not keep the track, and it jumped over the trestle.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine teases ou of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

CROUPY suffocations, night coughs and all the common affections of the throat and lungs quickly relieved by Dr. J. H. McLean's Tar Wine Lung Balm. 13

ATLANTA, GA., Oct. 19.—John Alexander to day filed a bill in equity against his wife, Lizzie Alexander. The petitioner claims that his wife, as his agent, purchased some property at the city marshal's sales, and that although he furnished the money, she had the deed made out to herself. As he could neither read or write, it was by mere accident that he discovered that his wife had perpetrated the fraud upon him. When he spoke to her about the matter, she said that she would have his name substituted for hers. She failed to do this, however, and for several years she, as his agent, paid the taxes with money furnished by him. He says she now claims the land as hers on the face of the title, and is making an effort to dispose of it. He charges her with perpetrating a fraud upon him and taking advantantage of his ignorance As soon as he failed to get posession of the property by her refusal to give it up he instituted suit for divorce from her.

An Interesting Address.

It was our happy pleasure to be present on last Saturday night to hear a practical and moral lecture in the interest of the great orgnization of the Knights of Labor.

John O'Keefe having been advertised to speak in this city on the night of the 20th inst. the Court House was lighted up, and was filled to its utmost capacity to hear the objects and the mission of the order discussed. Mr. O'Keefe came in on schedule time and took his position in the stand promptly, and began his address in a forcible and gratifying argument, explaining the object and intentions of the organization, and for two hours, we were perfectly amazed in interest, in listening to one of the finest moral lectures that it has ever been our lot to hear. Mr. O'Keith is a logical and argumentative speaker and his mission throughout the country will be hailed with interest by the fraternity and all other persons who happen to the good fortune to hear him.

Public meeting of the W. M. S

A public meeting of the W. M. S., of this place, was held at the Methodist church, on Sunday morning last. The ladies had a nice congregation of intelligent man and women.

The programme for the occasion was indeed appropriated and well executed. The voluntary by Mrs. A. C. Johnson and the Misses Allen and Cartledge was finely rendered. A part of the 107th, Psalm, was read and prayer offered by Rev N. F. Howaad. The singing conducted by Miss Nannie Martin, the Organist, and the choir, in which the entire audience joined, was lively and good. The recitation by Miss Fannie Gaillard, was interesting the subject being: "Room for the Children" Miss Mary E. Smith, the President, read an essay on "Woman's Work for Woman," which was very comprehensive and was listened to with profound attention. Rev. N. F. Howard, an honorary member of the society, gave us some words of encouragement. The writer then addressed the congregation on "The Duty of Mission Work." He attempted to show "what had been done,—"what is being done"—"what remains to be done in the evangelization of the world.

The crowning and triumphant effort of the occasion was made by Miss Mattie Moore, who taking the "Mite Box" rehearsed "the little Pink Box" which is an earnest appeal for the heathen children. She had but little trouble in getting enough money to make her "box jingle." Men, women and children came from all parts of the church bringing their pennies, nickles, dimes and quarters. There were four dollars and five cents raised in a few minutes as a voluntary contribution. "God loveth a cheerful giver." "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Hence, after the collection there was a spirit of happiness which pervaded the crowd. "From Greenland's Icy Mountains" was then sung, benediction pronounced by Rev. W. Boyd and the congregation left the church feeling it was good to be there.

Next week we will give the report of the auxiliary of Dahlonega corresponding Secretary and essay on "Woman's Work for Woman" by the President with permission of these ladies, C. V. W.

Belled Buzzards.

From the Dawson Ga News.

A Gentleman who lives a few miles from town reports quite an amusing incident that happened on his plantation Friday afternoon of last week. He was out in his cotton, and while out there he heard the ringing of a tiny bell. Being unabled to locate the whereabouts of the sound, he called the attention of the colored woman. By this time it had drawn nearer, and as the woman raised herself up from a stooping position, her eyes caught the sight of the buzzard, and she heard the sound of the bell. She was badly frightened. She Threw up her hands; her looked heavenward as her mouth dropped open and she seemed to be invoking divine assistance. However, she was only heard to say "O, Lawd!" and bolt for her house, where she was found half hour later in a praying position and muttering as to herself. As the only thing she said that could be understood was "Lawd forgive me dis time an I nebber do so any mo," it was thought that the old woman had been guilty of some sin and decided that the belled buzzards that she saw flying above her was a messenger from another world, sent to warn her so that she might flee the wrath to come.

We told the gentleman about two buzzards with bells on them having been turned loose in Albany a few days back, and that perhaps this was one of them.

DENNISON, TEX., Oct. 19.—Hollis Green, living on Blue river, in the Choctaw nation, was called to his door Tuesday night and shot dead. Green was ou important witness in murder trial at Fort Smith, and it is presumed that his death resulted from knowing too much of the case. The Indian poliece are making diligent search for the murderer.

CHINESE CAFES.

The Elaborate Courses in a Mongolian Restaurant.

Two Days Required to Eat a First-Class Spread.

There are eight thriving Chinese restaurants which can prepare a Chinese dinner in New York, writes Wong Ching Fou in the Cosmopolitan, almost with the same skill as at the famous "Dan quay Cha Yuen" (Delmonico's) of Shanghai or Canton. Those places are most thronged on Sunday, when the Chinese laundrymen of New York and neighboring cities come in for a general good time.

Unlike Americans, the Chinese do not generally pay by the dishes ordered, but by the tables or spreads, called by the Chinese "Gzuh." A first-class spread includes about forty courses, and it takes two days to finish the feast. It costs $50. A second-class spread, with twenty-eight courses, costs $40. A third-class spread, with eighteen courses, costs $25. The cheapest spread contains eight courses for $8. This is the lowest price for which a man can order a formal dinner in a first-class Chinese restaurant. But then the spread is made for any number of people within twelve.

If a man simply wants to eat a short meal, for himself and a friend or two, he can get ready-made dishes of fish, chicken, duck, pigs' feet, rice, tea, etc., cheaper than in any other restaurant, besides many dishes peculiar to Chinatown. The prices run from five cents to twenty-five cents. The foods are all chopped in small pieces, rendering knives and forks unnecessary. The Chinese table implements are chopsticks, of ivory or bone, a tiny little teacup and a porcelain spoon.

A staple dish for the Chinese gourmand is chow chop svey, a mixture of chickens' livers and gizzards, fungi, bamboo buds, pig's tripe, and bean sprouts stewed with spices. The gravy of this is poured into the bowl of rice with some —— (the prototype of Worcestershire sauce), making a delicious seasoning to the favorite grain. The tea is made by pouring hot water over the fresh Oolong in a cup, and covering it with a small saucer to draw. Then pushing back the saucer a little, you pour off the fluid into a smaller cup, and add more hot water to the grounds again. This may be repeated five or six times, and the last cup will be nearly as strong as the first. The Chinaman always takes spirits with his meals, pouring the rice whiskey into a tiny cup from a pewter pot. But he always drinks moderately, and never apart from his meals. For this reason drunken Chinamen are very rarely seen. When a party of Chinamen sit around a table, one dish of each kind of food is served, and all pick from the same dish with the chopsticks. When there are several courses, the earlier dishes are never removed, and by the time a good dinner has been served the table is literally buried with dishes.

The stoves, if they can be called such, are curiosities in themselves. They are long ranges built of low, broad bricks. In the top are great pits, into which are firmly built iron gridirons imported from China for frying, boiling or steaming purposes. Two of the brick ranges have only open pits, and there are places where the whole hogs are occasionally hung upon iron bars and roasted. They provide very quick and sure facilities for turning out a large roast of any kind in beautifully brown and crisp style. Coal is never used in these Chinese kitchens; only hay and hickory wood. At least five hundred Americans take their meals regularly in Chinese restaurants in orthodox Chinese fashion with chopsticks. This may be partly because Chinese diet is skillfully prepared, so that certain dishes work certain medicinal results. The hygienic functions of cooking elevate the kitchen directors in China to high social status. Many of these Americans have acquired gastronomical tastes, and order dishes like Chinese mandarins, but as a rule the keepers do not cater to any other trade than Chinese, because the Chinaman frequently orders two-dollar and three-dollar dishes, while the American seldom pays more than fifty or seventy-five cents for his Chinese dinner.

Who Sews on the Covers?

"Grandpa, do hens make their eggs?"

"Certainly."

"The same way a boy makes a ball when his papa don't buy one for him?"

"No, not exactly."

"Do the hens put in the yellow first and then put the white around it?"

"I guess they do, but you shouldn't be asking such questions; when you are older you will know all about it."

"I want to ask you just one more question; may I, grandpa?"

"Yes; go ahead."

"Who sews on the covers for them?"

Grandpa lies down and dies.---[St Louis Humorist.

What Push Can Accomplish.

The first experience of a millionaire merchant of Philadelphia on his arrival in this country aptly illustrates what push can accomplish. When he stepped ashore from the sailing vessel, he said, "I was without money or friends. I spoke to a man on the wharf, and asked him what to do. He replied, 'Work, young man. Have you any motto?' 'No,' I said. 'What do you mean?' He said, 'Every man must have a motto. Now think of one. Go out and hunt for work.'

"I started, thinking of a motto. As I walked along the street I saw painted on a door the word 'Push.' I said, 'That shall be my motto.' I did push at that door, and entered an office. I was asked what I wanted. I said, 'Work, and the word on your door gave me not only a motto, but confidence.'

"My manner pleased the man. He asked me many questions, all of which were answered promptly. He said at last: 'I want a boy of "push," and as you have adopted that for your motto, I will try you.'

"He did. My success followed, and the motto that made my fortune will make that of others."

The word is old, short, and crisp, but it expresses everything, and has carved out fortune and fame for hundreds of thousands of poor and obscure boys.—Dry Goods Chronicle.

The dairy interest is looking up in Virginia, and promises at no distant day to become a leading and profitable industry. A call has been issued for a meeting of the dairymen and creamerymen of that state at Richmond, for the purpose of organizing a state dairy association.

W. L. Douglas, the best known shoe manufacturer in the world, was born at Plymouth, Mass., August 22, 1845. When he was seven years old he was bound out to learn the shoemaking trade. His early life was a hard one, but he did not complain. He had an ambition to be master of his trade: he worked hard and learned all he could. Having saved a little money by hard work at the bench he began to manufacture shoes at Brockton, Mass., July 6, 1876. His knowledge of the business gave him a great advantage over his competitors. He worked hard and saved his money; his business began to increase and in May, 1883, his advertisement first appeared in the papers, advertising W. L. Douglas $3 Shoe. He has since added several other kinds, which he describes in his advertisement that appears in this paper from time to time. It is a fact known by those who wear his shoes that he gives more value for the money than any other shoe manufacturer. W. L. Douglas's factory is 426 feet long, 30 feet wide, three stories high; he employs 300 workmen with a pay roll of $4000 per week. His sales are 1800 pairs per day; his business is increasing very rapidly and will reach over $1,000,000 this year. He pays the highest wages paid in the city, and is highly regarded by those who work for him. If you are in want of a pair of shoes it will pay you to go to your dealer and examine a pair before you buy any other make. There is one thing certain, you will find his shoes the best value for the price, and free from shoddy. W. L. Douglas built up his reputation by making honest shoes.

Famous Women.

It is a significant fact that most of the women who have achieved fame in art, literature, or "affairs," have enjoyed vigorous health. This shows that the mind is never capable of the severe and continued application necessary to creative work, unless the body is at its best. The woman who aspires to fill an exalted place among her associates, must be free from nervous debility and female weakness. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will banish these, and it is warranted to restore those functional harmonies which are indispensable to health. As a specific for all those chronic weaknesses and ailments peculiar to women, it is unequaled.

The penitentiaries of the United States have 60,000 inmates, 500 of whom are females.

Consumption, Wasting Diseases

And General Debility. Doctors disagree as to the relative value of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites; the one supplying strength and flesh, the other giving nerve power, and acting as a tonic to the digestive and entire system. But in SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites the two are combined, and the effect is wonderful. Thousands who have derived no permanent benefit from other preparations have been cured by this. Scott's Emulsion is perfectly palatable and is easily digested by those who cannot tolerate plain Cod Liver Oil.

There are 700 men in the world, worth over $5,000,000; Jay Gould leading the crowd.

Great Little Men.

Some of the greatest men that ever lived were of small stature and insignificant appearance. The reader will readily recall many instances. Very small are Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, but they are far more effective than the huge, old-fashioned pills which are so difficult to swallow and so harsh in their action. The "Pellets" are gentle and never cause constipation. For liver, stomach and bowel derangements they have no equal.

Conventional "Monon" Resolutions.

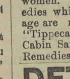

Whereas, The Monon Route (L. N. A. & C. Ry Co.) desires to make it known to the world at large that it forms the double connecting link of Pullman tourist travel between the winter cities of Florida and the summer resorts of the Northwest; and

Whereas, Its "rapid transit" system is unsurpassed, its elegant Pullman Buffet Sleeper and Chair car service between Chicago and Louisville, Indianapolis and Cincinnati unequalled; and

Whereas, Its rates are as low as the lowest; then be it

LOG CABINS were strongholds of love, contentment, health and happiness. Coon skins were nailed to the door and they were the happy homes of strong, healthy, noble men and women. MRS. SANDS—O, I know! It is easy to say "Don't let them read trash," but how do you know just what books to put into the hands of your girls? You certainly have no more time than I, yet you always seem to know exactly the right thing to do.

FRIEND—Well, Sarah, in this instance I get my information from Demorest's Monthly Magazine. They are now publishing some capital articles on the subject of "Reading for Girls;" and now that you speak of it, I will let you into a little secret. You always say that I am so well up on the matters of the day, and I really think I am; yet the fact is, I only get time to read my magazine; but when I have finished it, I know pretty much what is going on, as in Demorest's they do seem to cover the ground on all subjects that each member of my family is interested in. Why! John is as anxious each month for it to arrive as I am.

The Common Lot.

There is a place no love can reach,
There is a time no voice can teach,
There is a chain no power can break,
There is a sleep no sound can wake.

Sooner or later that time will arrive, that place will wait for your coming, that chain must bind you in helpless death, that sleep must fall on your senses. But thousands every year go untimely to their fate, and thousands more lengthen out their days by heedful, timely care. For the failing strength, the weakening organs, the wasting blood, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a wonderful restorative and a prolonger of strength and life. It purifies the blood and invigorates the system, thereby fortifying it against disease. Of druggists.

COMER'S GUARANTEED CHICKEN

Cholera Cure!

After using this medicine for the past ten years, and never finding a case of Chicken Cholera that it would not cure, I feel no hesitancy in offering it for sale with a guarantee that it will cure every chicken that has the Cholera with life enough to eat a particle of the medicine. Your dealer will REFUND THE MONEY, IF IT FAILS TO CURE. Please read the following TESTIMONIALS.

Judge HOWELL COBB, who is authority on all points pertaining to the poultry yard, publishes the following letter in the Southern Farmer: "COMER'S GUARANTEED CHICKEN CHOLERA CURE—This Summer I have had the first touch of cholera in my yard for several years. I lost my best cock and several hens. My neighbor, Mr. James T. Comer, of, Athens, Ga., heard of my trouble and sent me, to try, a package of his Cholera Cure. When I used this medicine I had two hens in collapse condition, too far gone to eat and about to die. Several others were affected. I fed the remedy in food, as directed, to the flock. I gave the two hens named the medicine in solution. One of these died, the other is now well. In twenty-four hours she was relieved, and in one week entirely well. The other affected fowls all recovered health and vigor in a few days. No other case developed. All my flock are now well. It is a month now since the disease disappeared. I believe the remedy of my friend Comer saved me from a destructive mishap of the worst destroyer of fowls.

HOWELL COBB.

HARMONY GROVE, GA., August 22, 1887.—This is to certify that I have given Comer's Guaranteed Chicken Cholera Cure a trial, and can safely recommend it as a certain cure for this fatal disease among fowls.

OLEOMARGARINE.

Art of Making Substance that Masquerades as Butter.

The Process of Manufacturing it Fully Described.

The process of making oleomargarine is described as follows by the New York Dispatch: The fat of the cow (or beef fat) is thrown, piece by piece, into large tanks containing tepid water, where it remains for an hour or two, when the water is drawn off, and fresh water brought into the tank. Each piece is then separately inspected and thrown into another tank containing pure water, where it remains about the same as at first. Pieces rich in oil are the only ones thrown into the tank; all the others are cut off and put into tierces, to be rendered into tallow. The fat in the second tank is again inspected, and passed into a third, after which third washing it is a pure white fat. The next step is to elevate this fat in cars, holding about 600 pounds each, to the top of the building, or third floor, alongside the disintegrating machines. These are like the regular meat-hashor. The meat is cut very fine in these machines, and is now in a commiauted state, which enables it to be rendered at a very low temperatura. This rendering is accomplished in a series of caldrons, jacketed and surrounded by water. The water in the jacket is heated to the boiling point by the introduction of live steam, which in time heats the caldron containing the fat, causing it to melt at a temperature of 114 degrees to 122 degrees F., which care is taken to prevent getting above 122 degrees, since the lower the temperature is kept the better is the product obtained. During the process, about five per cent. of ordinary salt is added, which helps the membrane to separate. As soon as the fat falls into the kettle, the steam is turned on to heat the water in the jacket after the heat thus accumulated is found sufficient to finish the process. When the fat is completely rendered, cold water is poured into the jacket. Revolving agitators constantly keep the mass in motion. When the agitation ceases and the fat finally comes to a rest, a membrane (or scrap) settles to the bottom of the kettle and the pure fat is left on top. This is left at rest about half an hour, when the pure fat is ready to be drawn off and strained into the settling kettles. An emulsion of water and oil, in the condition of froth, floats on the surface of the rendered fat, which is ladled off. The fat remains in the settling kettles from one to three hours, and is kept at a temperature of 118° to 122° F. When the settling is complete and the refined fat at the proper temperature, it is drawn off through fine sieves into tanks or cars, which are removed to the "seeding room," which is kept at a temperature of 85°. In this room the fat begins to solidify, very slowly, the more solid constituents crystallizing out at first, the whole mass at last assuming a kind of mushy consistency.

The seeding or crystallizing process requires from thirty-six to forty-eight hours, and must not be hurried. When the rendered fat is in the proper condition, it is pressed so as to separate the butter oil from the stearine. To accomplish this, the fat is packed in cloths set in molds. These packages are placed on plates of galvanized iron, in the press, one above the other. About 2,000 pounds to the square inch of pressure is applied. This is kept up until the butter oil ceases to flow from the press. This oil is received into a large reservoir, and if it is to be shipped, it flows into perfectly clean tierces, where, after solidifying, it is sealed up. A large quantity is shipped to Europe, to be churned up with milk and butter. The name "oleomargarine" was given to butter oil because it was thought to be composed principally of oleine and margarine, two chemical names applied to fats.

Silent Ball Players.

If you want to see an extremely curious and original game of baseball, one that in one respect at least is absolutely unique, declares the New York Sun, you can do so by going out to the grounds at Kendall Green at Washington, where the nine of the Deaf and Dumb Institution play. It seems odd in the gymnasium to see a lot of bright, athletic young fellows turning and twisting their supple bodies in utter defiance of anatomy and gravitation, and doing all sorts of physical impossibilities at a sign from their young professor, without an audible sound except an occasional "dull, sickening thud." It seems even odder to meet in the grounds a group of girls, strolling arm in arm with smiling faces and to hear no sound of their gay chatter, to see an animated game of tennis in progress with no cries of "Love fifteen!" "Deuce!" "Thirty, all!" &c. But to see a lot of boys playing baseball for dear life, running, rolling and leaping, batting, pitching and catching with frantic energy, but with none of the usual shrieks and yells that invariably accompany an amateur game, is strange indeed.

They play with great spirit and animation, and a foreign exuberance of gesticulation, and sometimes with those strange, inarticulate sounds that the dumb make. To the uninitiated it is difficult to comprehend the slight, almost imperceptible signs by which the Captain conveys his commands, but their keen, trained eyes never miss them. The regulation protests and expostulations to the umpire are conducted with fiery animation, and although he receives them in silence it is far from being a stoical silence. Hands and fingers fly in a perfect pyrotechnic display, and it is very evident one can be just as mad in deaf and dumb talk as in the choicest vocal vocabulary of profanity and slang. And after the game is done they sit around on the grass and talk it over, and say what made you do this? and why didn't you do that? and so on, just as the rest of the boys do, only they say it with their fingers instead of their tongues.

The pride and delight of these boys is Hoy of the Washington club, who, in spite of his misfortune in being a deaf mute, is one of the best ball players in the League. His brilliant performances are closely watched, and are a source of never ending emulation among the boys.

A Turning-Lathe Artist.

At East Buffalo, N. Y., lives George Solomon, a marvelous turning lathe artist.

When quite young Mr. Solomon was apprenticed to a cabinet-maker. He soon became proficient in the plain branches of his trade and commenced work at a wood lathe. So dexterous did he become in the use of his wheel and chisel that he had made a fortune when thirty-five years of age. Then he stopped working for profit, but continued to work at his lathe for pleasure.

He delights to work in wood and ivory, and some of his productions are marvelous, consisting of figures of people, animals and puzzles. He makes angular as well as round figures.

He once worked six months to turn out a perfect five-cornered star inside a perforated ivory ball. The star was made from the material inside the ball, and though loose there, it does not turn around, as each corner projects through a perforation in the ball.

One of Mr. Solomon's most simple feats is to put a piece of wood or ivory in a lathe and turn out four pigs at the same time, with a single chisel, each pig having a perfect curl in its tail.

He sometimes exhibits his productions, but always without pay. A friend says he has been offered large sums for his curiosities, but he refuses to sell them. He intends to give them to a museum.—[New York Telegram.

Surcease From Tickling.

A correspondent of Science writes as follows: I was a very ticklish youngster and my comrades sometimes used that weakness for their own amusement. One boy used to show how little effect tickling had upon him; but one hot summer day, as he was lying reading, I tickled him on the ribs and he almost went into convulsions. I found that he was far more sensitive than any boy in the company, and he revealed his secret to me under condition of my never telling anyone else. By holding his breath he became pachydermatous, and would let anybody tickle him as much as they pleased; but of course they always gave it up at once when they saw his solid look. I tried the plan and it worked admirably; and it is my only protection, even unto this day, for my cuticle is as sensitive as ever. The deduction is simple: a man holds his breath and the tickler is baffled.

Righteous Indignation.

"We don't want any poetry, young man," said the editor, "we have enough on hand to last longer than the paper."

"I am not a poet, sir," replied the young man, indignantly. "I am selling a soap warranted to remove oil, tar, pitch or stains of any kind, from the finest fabrics of the loom down to threeply carpets. You do me a gross injustice, sir."

"I beg your pardon, sir," said the editor, contritely.

The Pinelands.

The solemn song is over, for the wind has left the pines
All silent, with their stately heads upraised in serried lines,
Their music hushed as though they wait a message from on high,
They stand, like sentinels of God, against the crimson sky.

The glowing sun is sinking, sets aflame the purple west,
And gilds the flitting "messengers" that cry the hour of rest.
While dark against the afterglow the pines stand one by one,
More stately yet, their somber heights obscure the horizon.

So still they stand as daylight dies and twilight beckons night,
That e'en the passing buzzards pause, and lingering, alight,
While midst the shadowed canopies of never fading green
The sparkling play of fire-fly gay at hide-and-seek is seen.

Ah, many a dream, ye drifting winds among the fragrant boughs,
Your heaven-pervaded harmonies within our hearts arouse,
Such dreams shall, like the stalwart pines that rear their heads on high,
Uplift us on their winged flight toward the ambient sky.

Grand Jury Presentments, October Term, 1888.

We the grand Jurors, selected and sworn, for this, the October term, of the Superior Court of Lumpkin Co., for the year 1888, respectfully submit the following presentments:

We have examined the dockets of the various Justice's of the Peace and Notary's publics, that have been presented, and we find a portion of them irregularly kept—all of them correct, as to amount of cost charged.

We find the public roads and bridges, not in accordance with law, but as near so as the condition of the grounds over which they pass would practicably admit of, accept a portion of the public road near John A. Parker's farm, on clay creek. We find a change having been made on the Elijay road beyond Miller Davis' house, without proper authority, all of which, we recommend the ordinary to look after and have this portion of road put in good order.

We futher reccommend the custom of working the public roads just before each term of the ocurt be abandoned and the roads be worked at such times as they may need repair, so as to keep them in good order the year round.

We have examined the buildings of the county, and we find the court house in good repair. Also, the jail house safe and neatly kept. We, also, find three vacancies in the county Board of education by resignation. We reccomend the appointment of Benjamin F. Sitton, Henry F. Anderson, and John W. Jones, to fill said vacancies, they being chosen by members of this body. Also, find two vacancies in offices of Notary Public. We recommend the appointment of William W. Scott, as Notary Public of the 935 Dist. G. M. and Joseph Swansey, Notory Public of 1514th Dist. G. M. and John P. Ownby, 831 Dist, G. M. in place of A. S. Whichell. We find $28.43due county Treasurer R. H. Moore, as commissions for payments made to Tax collectors and recievers for the year 1885 and 1886. We recommend an order be granted by the Ordinary for the payment of the same.

We have examined the Tax Digest and find the following lands are given in under value, and we recommend the following assesments be raised, as follows.

William K. P. Head from	$120000
To	$1800.00.
George W. Head from	$1500.00
To	$1800.00.

G. L. GUNTER.

We have discussed among ourselves the propriety of having a farm and home for the pouper poor of this county. There are grave reasens why the county should possess such property. But we forbear going to this expense at present. In view however, of the fact that our county will soon be out of debt, we reccommend that the ordinary, in conjunction with the following citizens, to-wit: Col. Wier Boyd, Col. W. P. Price and Capt. F. W. Hall, be directed to investigate and report to the next grand Jury the following information: First, what farm already improved can be bought for. 2nd, what land unimproved, not exceeding 100. acres can be bought for. Third what the buildings and necessary improvements will cost. In no event shall the entire outlay exceed $1500.00. Fourth, abstracts of titles or information about titles, shall be procured by the committee. Fifth, the farm or home shall not be located more than four miles from Dahlonega. We, also, recommend that our representative and Senator be requested to have a local law inacted for Lumpkin county, by which said farm and lands after the same is established, shall be placed under the supervison of a board of visitors or directors consisting of five citizens, tax payers of the county, who shall have complete government and direction over the same and its inmates, as well as the removal and appointment of officers and imployees and such other powers as the ligislature may see proper to extend to said board. The ordinary of the county is directed to have the notice of application for the above law published in the Dahlonega Signal.

In taking leave of his honer, Judge C. J. Welborn, we tender him our most hearty approval of the manner in which he has dispatched the business of the court, and the Solicitor general, Howard Thompson, we tender him our thanks for his services rendered us.

We futher recommend that the foregoing presentments be published in the Dahlonega Signal.

THE CONTESTED ELECTION.

We learn that Col. Graham has entered into the Senatorial contest in goo earnest. Col. Boyd has been notified, and Friday is set to take down evidence in White county, where the illegality is alledged

A special dispatch from Atlanta to the Macon Telegraph of Oct 28th, says:

So far four notices of contests have been filed, one in the Senate and three in the House. In the thirty-second senatorial district Col. Weir Boyd was elected by seven votes over J. B. Graham and by forty over W. P. Price. Graham and Price have jointly agreed to contest the seat and have selected R. H. Baker and W. A. Charters of Dahlonega, as their counsel in the case. Graham and Price think that there was something wrong in the White county vote, which gave Boyd such a large majority.

Frequently accidents occur in the household which cause burns, cuts, sprains and bruises; for use in such cases Dr. J. H. McLean's Volcanic Oil Liniment has for many years been the constant favorite family remedy. 19

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years Doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manafactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucus surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. OLD people suffer much from disorders of the urinery organs, and are always gratified at the wonderful effects of Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and kidney Balm in banishing their troubles. $1.00 per bottle 14

—An almanac without a man is worse than a house without a woman.

—The old oak tree has been demolished and the root laid away in its original resting place. Dr. Jones suggested the idea of getting rid of the old root to dig the hole deeper and drop it in and cover it up. This was a splendid idea and the cheapest to get rid of it. The marshal is daily engaged with a number of hands cleaning away the debre. We understand that two citizens paid the expense of its removal for the wood. The wood no doubt will cost about seven dollars sixty five cents a cord.

—If your kidneys are inactive, you will feel and look wretched, even in the most cheerful society, and melancholy on the jolliest occasions. Dr. J. H. McLean's Liver and kidney Balm, will set you right again. $1.00 per bottle. 11

PLEASANT RIDGE.—On last Sabbath a new church was organized with the above title, at what has been known as peep crack church on the hill this side of Beardin bridge. It was organised with sixteen members and much interest is manifested by the neighbors of that vicinity in the interest of Christianity and the promotion of the good work to lead people to Christ, and instruct the young in religious exercises. A flourishing Sabbath Schools is in progress at this point, and a new house for worship will be erected at an early day to assist these long neglected people in religious worship.

On last Subbath Rev. A. C. Ward baptised four and Rev. R. M. Dowdy baptised one near Beardens bridge. Let this good work go on and let the people lend all the aid possible in erecting a church at this lovely selected locality.

No more will the name Peep Crack as it is obnoxious to the memory but the beautiful and appropriate name "Pleasant Ridge," will hereafter be admitted as the one substituted.

The Charter Oak, in Dahlonega, has been Demolished.

For fifty five years, dating back to 1833, when our town was first chartered, there has stood in the South-east corner of the public square a gigantic oak tree, which has furnished shade for man and beast through all these sultry summers. How much older than the town it is, no one knows—possibly it is a century old. It has sheltered hundreds of confederates and their children—to say nothing of the thousands of "home guards," who did valiant service about Dahlonega during the trying war times. It was sad to see Mr. A. G. Wimpy, who has lived in Dahlonega for over fifty years, come over and look upon this old time friend of his as the minions of the law, were destroying root and branch. He asked with tremulous voice if this," the last of its kind" could not be saved. It was only when he saw that its branches were rotten, and that its roots were decaying and that perhaps the storms of the incoming wipter, would cause it to fall and by falling do possibly harm to life and property, that this well known citizen together with Col. Price and Judge Burnside decided that it was "all for the best." In a few years new shade trees will take its place, and the young people will soon forget the charter oak, and "its deep umbrageous shelter." "But not so with our older citizens.

A little calculation just here might not be uninteresting to the younger portion of the community. Mr. Wimpy has passed under that tree in going to Sunday School at the Methodist church, almost with out intermission for forty years say 2,000 times.

To morning and evening service for 51 years not less than 5,000

To weekly prayer meeting and other meetings in the last 51 years say 2,000

At other times during a business career in town for 51 years, say 1 000.

Making a total of not less than 10.000 times.

Just how many times Judge Burnside has enjoyed the shade of this mammoth tree, none can tell. One might say that he has bodily lived under it for many years, for it was this tree that sheltered his well known apartments in the Burnside House. Col. Price's recollection of this tree dates for back in the forties when he and his companions played both night and day under and around it. In after life he passed under it almost without noticing it hundreds of times, because "a little lady" lives on that st., and it was from this great big tree his eye could first catch a glimpse of the cottage where she lived. For many years he has lived on this selfsame street, and his children have grown up to manhood and womanhood, loving this old land mark, and now his grand children have just commenced to romp under this mighty tree. These old citizens part with this giant oak as if it were a friend.

CHINESE TANNERS.

Primitive State of the Mongolian Leather Industry.

Their Tanning is Patriarchal in its Simplicity.

Chinese shoes are, of course, made chiefly of cloth, with felt soles, so that all the processes of the leather industry are in a very backward condition in the flowery empire. Their tanning is patriarchal in its simplicity. This, according to Consul Shepard of Hankow, China, is the way they manage:

"A vat is prepared—generally sunk in the ground—capable of holding about thirty hides. They are covered and left to soak in a solution of lime, called by the natives 'milk of lime.' They are kept in this bath sixteen days and upward, according to the season, cold weather requiring more time than warm. The hair is then loosened, and then the hides are taken singly, spread upon a bench and thoroughly put through a scraping process to remove the hair and the offal from the flesh side. The tool used for this is of peculiar construction. It is shaped like a capital letter H, one side being a steel or iron blade, and the other the handle, the cross-bar merely connecting them. The blade is about a foot in length and the handle two or three inches less. The workman places the handle against his breast for greater ease and power, and with this forcible application of the tool to the hide the hair is speedily removed. The hide is then turned with the flesh side up, and by a similar manipulation all offal is removed and the hide is reduced to a quite uniform thickness. A thorough washing follows, and the skin is cleansed of all remains of the lime. The refuse hair is saved for agricultural purposes, and the scrapings of the flesh side are boiled down for glue.

"After the cleansing the hides are subjected to a vigorous rubbing with a heavy sandstone, or other like article, until both sides are thoroughly smooth. When this process is completed a strong decoction of nutgall is sprinkled over the green leather and then the tanning is commenced. The nutgalls are boiled in water over a slow fire until they become liquefied, and the strained liquor furnishes all the tannin used. Nutgalls are abundant in the regions furnishing exports to Hankow, and considerable quantities are sent to the United States. There were received at Hankow from other native ports in the last year, 713.75 piculs, as entered at the foreign customs.

"The next process to which the skins are subjected is a peculiar one. A sort of furnace is built underground, with an opening in circular form, from which a dense smoke issues when the fuel is fired. The fuel required is either wheat straw or a species of grass gathered from a mountain side. Nothing else, it is believed, will answer the required purpose.

"During seven days the hides are passed back and forth through the smoke issuing from the furnace, and, unless it is to be blacked, the tanning of the leather is thus completed. If it is to be blacked, a liquor or vinegar, in which iron has been left to corrode, or a solution of nutgalls and copperas is ordinarily used, but at times simple lampblack is used.

"The yellow-brown color given to the leather by the smoking process is, however, considered to be of remarkable beauty, and is, therefore, greatly preferred by manufacturers and wearers.

"The leather is made soft by sprinkling it with saltpeter during the smoking, accompanied by repeated and violent kneading of it, drying in the air instead of by exposing to the sun. The strength of the solution of saltpeter as applied is said to be kept secret, no apprentice being initiated to the knowledge of it until he has served for three years."

An Unexplained Phenomenon.

W. C. Simmons, of Madison county, Ga., says that on a north hillside near his house are a dozen or more circles on the ground, varying in size from three to sixteen feet across. In the centre of each circle the grass seems to be greener than anywhere else, while the grass in the track is dead and dry as a chip. What has caused the circles to appear on the ground in this way is a mystery. They are perfectly round, and the track where the ground is dead is the same width all the way round, being about eighteen or twenty inches wide.—[Chicago Herald.

Strangled by the Dust.

Peter McArdle, a white employe of the Georgia Chemical Works in Atlanta, has met a peculiar and distressing death. While at work he fell into the dust-bin and was smothered before he could be extricated. In this department the dust fills the air, and the workmen have their mouths and nostrils covered with bandages. McArdle lost his balance and fell into the bin and was strangled with the dust.

THE FOUNDER OF CHICAGO.

He Was a Coal Black Negro from the Island of San Domingo.

[From the Chicago Times.]

The name of the real founder of Chicago, which has been left unsung by the proud Caucasian and permitted to drift into oblivion, is hereby rescued. It was Jean Baptiste au Sable, and its owner was a San Domingo negro, with complexion as black as the character of the fiend who would attempt to bribe an Alderman with a block of imaginary stock in a mythical railroad. The name gave rise to a suspicion of French blood in Jean's veins, but there was nothing in any feature to show it, and no doubt he was an African of the purest type. He had in his mind the founding of a great empire in the wilderness, and believed that a commingling of negro and Indian would produce the typical race of the world—large in brain and invincible in war. He had doubtless heard legends of the most famous of his race. Hannibal, who, descending the Nile, crossed into Europe, and after overthrowing the Roman legions advanced upon the "Mistress of the World" with a myriad of men. In order to do this, too, it was necessary to march his hosts across the Alps, and this was accomplished in a manner so superb that the later effort of Napoleon was but a feeble imitation.

It is certain, however, that Au Sable had dreams of power and empire. He thought first to ingratiate himself with the neighboring tribes of Indians, eventually consolidate them, and become chief of a great nation. As a preliminary step, and to provide for a future capital, he prospected throughout the vast wilderness, and with prophetic vision chose this as the locality. Nothing could change this determination, and despite the wiles and blandishments of real estate dealers at Marquette and Fort Clark (now Peoria) he took possession in 1799 of a strip of ground lying north of the river and extending from what is now Clark street to the lake. Thereon he built a hut and proceeded to negotiate.

Like many a white man before and since, Jean seems to have a great head for schemes, but a poor one for diplomacy, and after two or three years of incessant toil and increasing intrigue his vision of power faded away. Lo was suspicous, and would have none of it, and this distrust of his motives seems to have broken the adventurer's spirit, as he soon abandoned his claim; and being desirous of ending his life as soon and easily as possible located on the Illinois river near Peoria, where he soon died of break-back ague. Thus ended the dreamed-of-empire and perhaps obviated the necessity of civil rights law enabling white people to enter negro hotels and theatres in Chicago.

DISCLOSED BY A CLOUD BURST.

A Buried City Strangely Brought to Light in New Mexico.

The propriety of a bill introduced a day or two ago by Chairman Holman of the Committee on Public Lands into the United States House of Representatives, to set apart a large tract of land near Cochite, on the Rio Grande, in New Mexico, as a national reservation, on account of its many archæological remains, was illustrated and confirmed by the Hon. Amada Chavez, one of the leading citizens of the Territory, who lives not far from that section of country, and who comes occasionally to El Paso on business.

He discovered a short time ago, one mile north of the little town of San Mateo, the ruins of an extensive city, the existence of which had never even been suspected before. The action of the windshade covered the larger portion of the ruins with sand and other detritus, and converted the whole into an extensive mound, and it was only a severe rain storm and cloud burst, sweeping away one angle of this mound and disclosing some heavy stone walls, that made the discovery possible. Mr. Chavez has since uncovered one or two of the ruins and obtained a number of interesting relics. A skeleton was found having three strands of beads around its neck—one of turquoise, one of jet, and the other of bone. There were also large earrings of jet and turquoise with the skeleton, and remains of the hair, which was not black, but light brown, besides ornamental pottery arrow-heads, with a quantity of maize, partly carbonized.

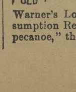

This skeleton, with the articles enumerated, was found in a small chamber of masonry built up with a very adhesive cement. The excavations thus far made have discovered a large building, with massive stone walls and a tower at each corner. It looks more like the remains of a citadel than an ordinary dwelling. The masonry is of the best kind, and the interior chambers are plastered and painted white. In the centre of this structure was found a water reservoir, from which stone aqueducts led in many directions. A dim tradition among the native Pueblo Indians located here a prehistoric city named Guato, which was still in existence at the time of Cortez's coming to America.

Letter From the Ex-Sheriff of Chautauqua County, New York.

MAYVILLE, N. Y., Dec. 2, 1885.

I am glad to say, from a long personal experience with ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS, that I am able to endorse all the good things that have ever been said about them, and supplement these by saying that I frankly believe their value cannot be estimated. Their breadth of usefulness is unlimited, and for prompt and sure relief to almost every ache and pain that flesh is heir to, no other remedy, in my opinion, either external or internal, equals them in certainty and rapidity. I have used them at one time for rheumatism, another for backache, again for bronchitis, always with the same result—a speedy cure. L. T. HARRINGTON.

A Dream of Fair Women.

Tennyson in his exquisite poem, dreams of a long procession of lovely women of ages past. This is all very well, but the laureate would have done the world a greater service if he had only told the women of the present how they could improve their health and enhance their charms. This he might easily have done by recommending the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Health is the best friend of beauty, and the innumerable ills to which women are peculiarly subject, its worst enemies. Long experience has proven that the health of womankind and the "Favorite Prescription" walk hand in hand, and are inseparable. It is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and fathfully carried out for many years.

Lung Troubles and Wasting

Diseases can be cured, if properly treated in time, as shown by the following statement from D. C. FREEMAN, Sydney: "Having been a great sufferer from pulmonary attacks, and gradually wasting away for the past two years, it affords me pleasure to testify that SCOTT'S EMULSION of Cod Liver Oil with Lime and Soda has given me great relief, and I cheerfully recommend it to all suffering in a similar way to myself. In addition, I would say that it is pleasant to take."

Leave hope behind,
All ye who enter here!

So ran the dire warning which Dante read on the portals of the Inferno. So runs the cruel verdict of your friends if you are overtaken by the first symptoms of that terrible disease, consumption. "Leave hope behind! Your days are numbered!!" And the suggestion against death is given up in despair. But while there is life, there is hope! Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has cured hundreds of cases worse than yours; and it will cure you, if taken in time. But delay is dangerous. No power can restore a wasted lung; the "Golden Medical Discovery," however, can and will arrest the disease.
